Jones Lang LaSalle Real Estate Investor Sentiment Survey

Jones Lang LaSalle's Real Estate Investor Sentiment Survey (REISS) is a bi-annual research initiative designed to assess opinions and the future intentions of leading real estate investors across the MENA region. The survey explores opinions on current and future trends and also establishes a benchmark position with respect to a number of key issues and drivers of investment decisions.

The programme was launched in association with Cityscape Intelligences in 2008, with the reports being launched at the regular Cityscape conferences in Abu Dhabi and Dubai. Over the past 2 years Jones Lang LaSalle has assessed the competitiveness of many of the MENA's emerging cities from an investment perspective and built a good understanding of how investors view these markets and how this is likely to influence future investment decisions.

Jones Lang LaSalle and Cityscape Intelligence received responses from over 200 of the regions leading real estate investors across the MENA region to the last survey. Participants are limited to investors and the survey does not include advisers or analysts.
